Public charities that are employers but do not require such disclosure from their employees must include in the report the names of all employees who were paid a total of $250,000 or more from third parties, the identity of all such third parties, the amount paid by each, and a brief description of the reason for each such payment. Public charities that own more than $10 million in investments and/or real property must attach a list of all such investments and/or real property and the value of each such investment and/or real property at the end of the reporting period. Effective January 1, 2013, the report must include a statement of all federal, state and local taxes that would have been paid during the reporting period if the public charity was not otherwise tax exempt. The Attorney General shall issue regulations that define the methodology by which the calculations of what taxes would have been paid shall be made.
