"Our mission is to provide a permanent, effective voice for women across Massachusetts"

On behalf of the Massachusetts Commission on the Status of Women, it is my pleasure to present a brief summary of our FY22 Annual Report. We are incredibly grateful for your belief in our mission: with an operating budget doubled in size, our competent staff and team of Commissioners maintain the commitment to supporting women and girls in the Commonwealth. This increased budget allows for expanded programming, more in-depth research and outreach efforts, and the ability to compensate the dedicated interns who provide critical support to the staff. This funding enables MCSW to develop long-term initiatives that more richly report on the status of women and girls throughout the Commonwealth, acting as a central location for data gathering and analysis. Five new staff members and thirteen interns joined us this year to carry out our mission, which benefits from a deeper and more collaborative effort with our 11 Regional Commissions. This year, MCSW reported on the experiences of women in the workforce, the 4th in a series of Covid-19 reports that began in March 2020. Using various platforms, MCSW listened to the women of Massachusetts discussing their concerns about workplace treatment, unequal benefits, the difficulties of remote work, and mental health. From this came the Women in the Workforce Report, which offers policy recommendations and legislative actions to better aid the women of Massachusetts in the workforce. Other programmatic highlights included a celebration of MCSW Monumental Changemakers— the first for MCSW; our Girls Initiative which in 2021 hosted a series of listening sessions that brought forth our second Girls report; rebranded as the Girls Empowerment and Leadership Initiative (GELI); we conducted virtual regional discussions with each of the four appointing authorities and 11 regional chapters, and ended the year with a comprehensive Regional Commissions Conversation with the Massachusetts Caucus of Women Legislators. We look forward to closing out the Fiscal year 2022 with our annual Commonwealth Heroines Celebration on June 22nd.

Sincerely,

Denella Clark
Chairwoman

Public Hearing November 2021

Each year, the MCSW holds hearings across the Commonwealth to hear testimony from citizens, government officials, and local organizations that provide assistance to women and girls about the issues they are facing in their communities. The testimony presented at hearings informs both our research and legislative work at the Commission. On November 18th, the Commission held the only public hearing of the year in collaboration with the Regional Commissions; this was due to a transition within the MCSW staff. The public hearing focused on the topic of women in the workforce and sought to elevate the voices of women in the workforce regarding financial, mental health, and in-person/remote work experience. The Commission used the testimony collected to inform the advocacy work in regards to legislation that can help women in the Commonwealth. We also used the online survey and community conversations to create a full and very informative report.

Community Conversations

This year the MCSW held community conversations with a diverse group of seven women-centered organizations around Massachusetts. Between January and February, the MCSW met with MomUp, South Shore Women’s Business Network, Community Action Pioneer Valley, Brockton Workers Alliance Community, La Colaborativa in Chelsea, and the Mashpee Wampanoag Tribe.

Each conversation was structured with guiding questions. The community conversations were supplemental to the survey data and public hearing for the Women in the Workforce Report, emphasizing the value of storytelling. These conversations ensured that the voices of women who are historically underrepresented were included in a more focused manner in the report. Our community conversation with La Colaborativa was hosted in Chelsea at their headquarters the rest of the community conversations were held virtually.

Questions that guided our conversations were:

- How much does your racial/ethnic identity affect your treatment in the workforce?
- Does your income support individuals other than yourself; if so, who of the following does your income support?
- How much has your work status affected your ability to prioritize health care appointments (doctor’s visits, physical therapy, mental health appointments, dentist appointments, etc.)?
- How have your workplace experiences changed in the past year?
- How have your personal home life responsibilities changed in the past year? (i.e. work life, home life, child care, home care, social life, bill paying, etc.)?
Monumental Changemakers

On January 20th, the MCSW honored former state Commissioners for their commitment and inspiring work during their tenure. Joined by Senate President Spilka, the full commission recognized 12 former Commissioners for their service to MCSW and the women and girls of the Commonwealth.

The event began with special remarks from Senate President Spilka where she discussed the progress women in the Commonwealth have made, but importantly the work that still has to be done. She touched on the need to improve childcare accessibility and affordability and referenced our Childcare report from 2020, how crucial it is to continue to support women and girls in the Commonwealth during the pandemic, and the importance of ensuring the MCSW has sufficient funding to continue to do their work. She thanked the MCSW and former commissioners for their efforts in providing a permanent voice for the women and girls of Massachusetts.

Former commissioners were honored with a monumental changemaker package delivered to their homes which included a citation from their legislator, a certificate, and an engraved vase. A slide show was presented by Chairwomen Clark that highlighted the work and roles of former Commissioners.

Full list of Past Commissioners (only the past 4 years):

- Margot Parrot, Nov. 2012 - Oct. 2018
- Sara Schnorr, Apr. 2016 - Oct. 2021
- Marlene Sallo, Nov. 2019 - Nov. 2021
- Ruth Bramson, Dec. 2006 - Nov. 2021
Since 2001, the MCSW has served as a member of the multi-organization coalition responsible for planning the Boston-area International Women’s Day Breakfast. Each year, the Breakfast addresses a different topic relevant to women’s advancement and equity. On March 8th Commissioners from the MCSW attended the 24th Annual Boston-Area International Women’s Day Brunch. The event was structured as a discussion on the topic of “Unpacking the Shecession: Reimagining a New Workforce in a New World.”

Regional AdHoc Committee

The Regional AdHoc Committee was created to alleviate some of the work from the Program and Planning Committee, staff, and interns after the moving on of our Program Director in April of 2021. The Regional AdHoc Committee held monthly meetings with the chairs and assisted in their operational needs. This committee also took on the responsibilities that were under the purview of the Program and Planning committee such as reviewing applications for those requesting a seat on any of the regional commissions, assisting each regional with onboarding, planning of regional convenings, and outreach coordination with MCSW events. The AdHoc committee was discontinued after the new Regional Director Tina Games was fully onboard.

Women in the Workforce Report

To read the full report, please visit: Women in the Workforce Report

On April 21st, the MCSW released a report titled Women in the Workforce During COVID-19 & Beyond: A Report on the Status of Women in Massachusetts and showcased Related Policy Recommendations. This report looks at the systematic inequalities and barriers women face in the workforce and addresses the challenges revealed in women’s lived experiences across the Commonwealth. This report is specific to the workforce and looked to capture women’s experiences across geographic, ethnic, cultural, and socio-economic backgrounds. The MCSW offers findings and related policy recommendations which contribute to the conversation about the impact of COVID-19 and working women and serve as a resource to policymakers at the state and local levels.

Methodology

The MCSW conducted quantitative research in the fall of 2021 and winter of 2022, which included: a survey of Massachusetts women which garnered data on workplace benefits, flexibility and opportunities; a virtual hearing held in November 2021, and 7 Community Conversations across the Commonwealth. This report shares the feedback and voices of women who completed the surveys and participated in public forums.

MCSW released a google survey via email, direct contact, social media, and MCSW newsletter, which asked respondents about different variables in their work experience. The survey was open from November 5th, 2021 to February 28th, 2022. The survey was offered in six different languages including English, Spanish, Portuguese, Mandarin, Vietnamese, and Haitian Creole.

MCSW held a virtual public hearing on November 18th, 2021, with 83 stakeholders in attendance and 15 participants who provided oral and written testimony.
In order to highlight the voices of women who are traditionally underrepresented, MCSW piloted a series of 7 Community Conversations. The MCSW collaborated with its regional commissions to partner with community organizations to ensure that diverse groups of women not captured in the survey were able to share their unique perspectives. The Community Conversations were held from January 10th, 2022 through February 28th, 2022.

Research & Findings

From the collection and analysis of qualitative and quantitative data, four primary areas emerged: (mis) treatment in the workplace, gaps in workplace advancement and opportunities, The Second-Shift Effect, and prioritizing physical and mental health.

1. (Mis)treatment in the workplace
   • Data indicates that policy priorities should be focused on addressing the effects of discrimination in the workplace, both for women and people of color, but especially for women of color. The MCSW’s survey showed that race affected treatment in the workplace, with women of color much more likely than white women to state their race significantly affected their treatment. Respondents reported myriad mistreatments in the workplace including being cut off in conversation, getting labeled as too assertive for expressing one’s opinions, and worrying about or directly experiencing sexual harassment.

2. Gaps in workplace benefits and advancement opportunities
   • Data collected showed that the most prevalent workplace benefits offered to respondents were healthcare/insurance (80 percent), paid time off (79 percent), and pension or retirement funds (73.4 percent). Only 43 percent had access to mental health services benefits, while 31.4 percent had dependent care accounts, and only 7.38 percent received childcare benefits. About 20 percent of respondents indicated that they have no opportunities for advancement. Lack of opportunity for advancement is most prevalent for women earning less than $50,000 per year, with two-thirds of respondents having no option of receiving salary raises, education advancements, or leadership opportunities.

3. The Second-Shift Effect: home and work-life responsibilities
   • The Second Shift effect refers to the household and caregiver obligations women encounter following their day’s labor outside of the home. This effect exacerbates the detrimental impact of limited workplace benefits and advancement opportunities. Survey data showed a tendency for women to overextend themselves to satisfy professional and domestic needs. This second shift effect is even more burdensome for women by the inflexibility of employers to allow for hybrid work formats, limited childcare benefits, and having to provide for financially dependent others.

4. Prioritizing physical and mental health
   • Data showed that negative effects on mental health were consistent when disaggregated between income range and race/ethnic identity. However, when broken down across age groups, younger women reported negative effects on mental health at much higher rates than older women. Survey data additionally showed that only a small portion of women whose mental and physical health was significantly negatively affected by their work status had benefits related to mental health covered.
Recommendations

In partnership with the eleven regional commissions, MCSW makes the following recommendation to lawmakers and the private sector:

- Normalize affordable and accessible high-quality childcare as a public good
- Normalize gaps in employment
- Normalize innovations in work flexibility
- Normalize inclusive and dignified workplace cultures
- Normalize mental health and physical benefits
- Normalize an intersectional approach and disaggregated data in policy review

Legislative Actions

The MCSW has endorsed the following bills, each related to a major finding of this report:

- “Common Start” An Act providing affordable and accessible high-quality early education and care to promote child development and well-being and support the economy in the Commonwealth. (H.605/S.362)
- “CFC: Campaign Funds for Childcare” An Act supporting parents running for public office. (S.475/H.760)
- An Act addressing barriers to care for mental health (S.2572)
- An act Requiring One Fair Wage (S.1213)

In addition, the MCSW urges consideration and support of the following proposed bills:

- An Act relative to work from home incentives (H.2900)
- An Act relative to helping residents work remotely (S.54)
- An Act relative to fair pay comparable work (H.237)
- An Act removing barriers to lifting people out of poverty (S.102)
- An Act providing a guaranteed minimum income to all Massachusetts families (S.1852)
Legislative Briefing

On April 21st the MCSW held a legislative briefing for the release of the Women in the Workforce report. The event began with a welcome and introduction from Chairwomen Denella Clark and was followed by remarks from Representative Patricia Haddad and Senator Joan Lovely (Co-chairs of the MCWL). The report team, composed of Commissioners and Staff members, introduced the report and thanked the appointing bodies for their continued support. Commissioner Jean Fox (Chair of Program and Planning Committee) then presented the findings of the report. A PowerPoint presentation reviewed the methodology, community partners, policy recommendations, legislative actions, and the four major findings. Statistics and testimony from respondents were shared with participants and legislators. Legislators were then able to make comments and ask questions after the presentation concluded. Closing remarks were made by Commissioner Guimel DeCarvalho.

Girls Empowerment and Leadership Initiative [formerly known as The Girls Initiative]

The Girls Empowerment and Leadership Initiative (GELI) seeks to empower young women and gender expansive youth, ages 14-22, across the Commonwealth to advocate for themselves and their community. This initiative focuses on developing leadership and civic engagement skills through educational workshops and skill-building opportunities.

On April 29, 2022 the Commission hosted a Girls Empowerment and Leadership Summit (GELI), built upon the 2020 and 2021 Girls Initiative listening sessions and online survey responses. Girls have reported diminished self-esteem and self-confidence, a decline in healthy personal relationships, and a general need for an increase in support groups, among other findings. The Summit was created to address those needs through 3 workshops: Leadership & Confidence Building, Mental Health & Success, and the Current STEM Culture. In addition to the workshops, the Commission created a short exit survey to give an opportunity to the participants to provide feedback and recommendations for what they want to see at the next GELI event.

Demographics

The combined data from the exit survey and the Summit included the voices of 54 girls. Nineteen voices were survey respondents, and 35 were Summit participants. Collectively, the initiative reached all 14 counties in Massachusetts with a majority of participants coming from the following counties: Barnstable, Bristol, Essex, Middlesex, Suffolk, and Worcester.
Findings

Through the exit survey and workshop data it was clear to see that many of these participants simply wanted the opportunity to network, learn, and build skills that are integral to them becoming a successful leader within their community and beyond. When asked what the Summit workshop has inspired them to pursue in the future one respondent said, “It has inspired me to put myself out there and speak up for myself. I did not know how much power my story could hold.”

Feedback and Next Steps

The Commission’s goal for the next Girls Empowerment and Leadership Initiative is to have an in person event in 2023. Numerous participants expressed strong interest in more frequent meetings, possibly biannually. The Commission intends to make the next initiative interactive and allow participants to attend more than one workshop. MCSW is committed to building on the foundation work of past Girls Initiatives, with the inclusion of the feedback we have received, as part of its 2023 priorities.

See “APPENDIX A - Girls Empowerment and Leadership Initiative Report” on page 39

MCWL Conversation with MCSW Regional Commissions

On May 16th, MCSW hosted Regional Commissions and the Massachusetts Caucus of Women Legislators, for a conversation about the biggest issues women and girls face in each region of the Commonwealth. The event began with welcoming remarks from Chairwoman Denella Clark, Interim Executive Director Shaitia Spruell, and the Caucus Co-Chairs, Representative Patricia Haddad and Senator Joan Lovely.

The event was structured with guiding questions that each Regional Commission addressed with responses and questions from Caucus Legislators. Tina Games, MCSW Regional Commissions Director, introduced the guiding questions for each region:
• What are the biggest concerns of women in your region?

• What are your current legislative priorities as a regional commission?

• What legislation would you like our legislators to consider for your region?

Each Regional Commission provided answers to the guiding questions and shared legislative events that were specific to their region. All Regional Commissions shared concerns about the lack of affordable child care and housing. Commissioners from the western region of Massachusetts expressed specialized concern about rising rates of violence and drug use. Domestic violence was also a topic of conversation for multiple regions and many shared their efforts in trying to combat this issue. Other issues included food insecurity, lack of job opportunities, lack of mental health providers, and unequal access to health care. Many Commissioners shared statements about their support for female reproductive rights and access to quality health care. Commissioners also addressed their dismay over the baby formula and diaper shortage affecting women across Massachusetts.

The conversation gave Regional Commissions a platform to discuss their legislative priorities with our female legislators. Though Regional Commissions can establish legislative priorities different from the State Commission’s priorities, all regions shared their support for the bills that MCSW has endorsed. Bills related to child care received the most support. The Common Start bill and the campaign funds for childcare bill received unanimous support from regionals. In addition, Regional Commissioners expressed their support for the I AM bill (this bill is especially important to the Bristol County Regional Commission since they and Representative Haddad were strong advocates for free menstrual products and diapers before the bill was introduced). Regional Commissions also added their support for the one fair wage bill, the healthy youth act, and the parity on boards bill.

This event also gave Regional Commissions an opportunity to hear about the practices and initiatives of other regions. Commissioners from Essex County, Hampden County, Eastern Regional, and Plymouth County discussed their plans to increase the involvement of girls within their region as MetroWest has done with the creation of their Athena Council. The event ended with the sharing of upcoming legislative events for each region.

Regional Convening - Spring 2022

On June 7th, our 11 Regional Commissions will gather for their bi-annual training and development session. Our regional convenings are focused on education, support, and networking. This year’s spring convening will act as a revitalization of the regionals coming through two years of struggles and uncertainty. We will be providing the opportunity to review the current Regional Commissioner handbook and policy book - and to address concerns and questions. We’ll also be covering other topics, such as partnering with regional organizations and being more visible in our communities.
Commonwealth Heroines [formerly known as Unsung Heroines]

The annual Commonwealth Heroine Award honors women and girls across the state who are recognized as leaders and contributors to their community and the Commonwealth. Commonwealth Heroines are women and girls who don’t always make the news but always make a difference through their time, talent, and enthusiasm to make the lives of others better. This year, 121 women received this honor. The celebration is scheduled to take place on June 22nd, in person for the first time since 2019. The heroines will be honored through remarks from the Commission, a live slideshow presentation, and the opportunity to meet and celebrate each other. This year there will be a special recognition given to Lieutenant Governor Karyn Polito for her advocacy and work on improving the lives of the women and girls of the Commonwealth. Traditionally the Heroines receive a program book featuring photos and biographies of each heroine. They also receive a letter of notification of the award and a certificate to recognize their community work. This celebration is a time to honor great women and girls who enrich lives across the Commonwealth.

Priority Legislation

As a part of its mission to provide an effective voice and advocate for the women and girls of Massachusetts, the MCSW identifies priority bills, the center of our legislative focus and action. In the 2020-2022 year, the Commission focused on addressing women’s economic security, political participation, and childcare accessibility through the following legislation:

An Act Providing Affordable and Accessible High-Quality Early Education and Care to Promote Child Development and Well-Being and Support the Economy in the Commonwealth. (S.362/H.605)

This bill would establish a universal system of affordable, high-quality early education and child care for all Massachusetts families. The system would cover early education and care for children age birth through 5, after and out of school time for children age 5-12, and children with special needs through age 15.

2022 RECOMMENDATIONS FOR APPOINTING AUTHORITIES

The MCSW gathered information from a diverse set of public stakeholders to determine its recommendations. It held one public hearing (instead of four because we felt that we needed to put all of our focus on healing women in the workforce, but we collaborated with our regionals on all of the local regional hearings), partnered with community organizations to host seven community conversations, connected and convened with its 11 regional commissions to understand local issues impacting women, and drew from its 19 commissioners’ perspectives and experiences as leaders in their communities.

In accordance with the responsibilities of the MCSW under MA Chapter 3, Section 66 of the Massachusetts General Laws, the MCSW respectfully submits the following recommendations for action to our appointing authorities:

Please refer to “Legislative Initiatives;” on page 18

We also ask the legislative body to take the resolution language that we have included in our Women of Color and Women in the Workforce report and file at your leisure. The MCSW can only be successful if we have a strong partnership with our elected officials across the Commonwealth. Girls Empowerment and Leadership Initiative Report

On April 29, 2022, the Commission hosted a Girls Empowerment and Leadership Summit (GELI), built upon the 2020 and 2021 Girls Initiative listening sessions and online survey responses. Girls have reported diminished self-esteem and self-confidence, a decline in healthy personal relationships, and a general need for an increase in support groups, among other findings. The Summit was created to address those needs through 3 workshops: Leadership & Confidence Building, Mental Health & Success, and The Current STEM Culture.

The Current STEM Culture
Using data and research findings and actual experiences by young professional women in Science, Technology, Engineering, and Math (STEM) fields, this workshop facilitated a discussion on the perspectives and experiences of girls and young women to explore some of the barriers they may face as they pursue STEM education and training. Participants in this session had an opportunity to learn about what the data revealed, share stories about obstacles and opportunities, and worked together to create a vision for girls and women in STEM.

Leadership and Confidence Building
This youth-led workshop focused on leadership skills, storytelling, and community organizing. Participants learned more about how to “step into” their power, be an advocate for themselves and others and effect real change in their school, community, and state.

Mental Health and Success
This workshop’s goal was to spread the message that prioritizing your mental health will benefit you at home, school, and work. Participants learned how to be more mindful of mental health challenges in their day-to-day life. The expected outcome is to end the stigma of mental health in the professional space.

Qualitative Data

The Current STEM Culture
In the current STEM culture workshop, participants were able to take a deep dive into the data that measures success, particularly looking at STEM courses, degrees, and careers. Facilitators addressed the difference between interest, confidence, and sense of belonging that girls/young women have when starting out in STEM courses. There was definitive acknowledgment that gender disparities begin to emerge in higher education. These disparities continue and expand, leaving women underrepresented in STEM careers. Participants were able to learn about the contributing factors that are in play when analyzing the gaps of girls and women in STEM. Youth facilitators were able to share their stories as young women working in STEM. As a group, the discussion was centered around these disparities and experiences that some may have confronted in their STEM journey.

“Growing up I thought I didn’t like STEM because I didn’t like math, but I have taken a lot of engineering classes while in high school. I think STEM is a lot broader than it gets credit for.”
- Participant

Another participant recalled a situation where a substitute teacher had asked the students what they wanted to be. When a boy in her class said he wanted to be a rocket scientist, the substitute teacher said “good for you!” When she said she wanted to be a brain surgeon, the sub said “you’re going to have to do a lot of work!”

Leadership and Confidence Building
In the leadership and confidence-building workshop, participants were able to compile keywords that came to mind when being asked what comes to mind when thinking about traditional leadership.

What or who comes to mind when you think about traditional leadership?

parents  patient  teachers  courage

As a group, they discussed what are important qualities to have as a leader and discussed people that they admire and what makes that person admirable.
Participants were given the opportunity to draft their own leadership story, writing about an issue they cared about and what story they can tell to help others understand why they want to see that change. Participants shared their stories and discussed what resonated with them.

“One issue that I’ve thought about recently is the lack of queer female Asian media/movies. In my LGBT Politics class, we learned that any type of exposure is a big factor in reducing homophobia. On Google I think there’s only 2 female queer Asian movies that pop up when you do a search.”

Mental Health and Success
In the mental health and success workshop, participants learned what taking care of an individual’s mental health really looks like. “Mental health is a buzzword, but what does it really mean?” A person’s mental health status cannot be based solely on appearance. People often appear to have everything together, but they may be suffering internally. The workshop facilitator explained the importance of seeking professional help instead of relying on friends or family. While friends and family can be a support system, seeking assistance from a skilled professional may be far more beneficial. Part of the workshop showcased public figures who have been outspoken about their own mental health journey. It is important for public figures (such as Simone Biles, Beyoncé, and Billie Eilish among others) to use their platforms to talk about mental health, decreasing the persistent stigma in American society.

Outreach
The Commission reached out and invited the many Girl Serving Organizations that were included in the 2021 Girls Initiative. State and Regional Commissioners conducted their own networking with an established outreach letter. Each workshop’s facilitators conducted additional outreach for their respective workshops. School districts were also contacted by numerous regional commissioners, including Taunton Public Schools, Franklin Public Schools, Monomoy Regional School District, and Freetown-Lakeville, among others. All superintendents were notified and encouraged to share the Summit information with their networks.

Girls Empowerment & Leadership Findings

Demographics
The combined data from the survey and the Summit included the voices of 54 girls. Nineteen voices were survey respondents, and 35 were Summit participants. Collectively, the initiative reached all 14 counties in Massachusetts with a majority of participants coming from the following counties: Barnstable, Bristol, Essex, Middlesex, Suffolk, and Worcester.
Topics of Concern (Survey Data)
- Affordable Housing
- Affordable Healthcare
- Access to Public Transportation
- Poverty
- Homelessness
- Availability of Jobs
- Quality of K-13 Public Schools
- Lack of mental health support
- Domestic violence
- Maternity leave length
- Lack of diversity; mentions of racial bias
- LGBTQIA+ rights “lack of community LGBTQIA+ centers within the city”
- Need for addressing Asian Hate in communities

Through the exit survey and workshop data it was clear to see that many of these participants simply wanted the opportunity to network, learn, and build skills that are integral to them becoming a successful leader within their community and beyond. When asked what the Summit workshop has inspired them to pursue in the future one respondent said, “It has inspired me to put myself out there and speak up for myself. I did not know how much power my story could hold.”

Feedback and Next Steps
The Commission’s goal for the next Girls Empowerment and Leadership Initiative is to have an in-person event in 2023. Numerous participants expressed strong interest in more frequent meetings, possibly biannually. The Commission intends to make the next initiative interactive and allow participants to attend more than one workshop. MCSW is committed to building on the foundation work of past Girls Initiatives, with the inclusion of the feedback we have received, as part of its 2023 priorities.
